4,000 GERMAN DEAD IN STREETS

STALINGRAD DEFENDERS YIELD GROUND

THOUGH the defenders of Stalingrad have been forced back in the northern suburbs, they broke the German attempt to drive a wedge through to the Volga and cut the Russian forces in two, says Reuter's Special Correspondent. So fierce has been the fighting that in their capture of two streets the Germans lost 4,000 dead and 60 tanks.

Desperate battles are continuing north-west of the city, where most of the fighting is now concentrated, while in the south the struggle is raging in full force, the Soviet command having launched an attack.

TIMOSHENKO'S PROGRESS

Reuter's Special Correspondent at Moscow stated last night that, under pressure of wave after wave of German infantry and a mass Luftwaffe assault, Stalingrad's defenders had been forced back again in the northern suburbs. The Germans captured two streets, but their attempts to drive a wedge through to the Volga to cut the Russian forces in two have failed. There is no sign of weakening in the German offensive, although the capture of these two streets alone has cost them 4,000 dead and 60 tanks destroyed. Though all attempts to cut through the workers' settlement had been repelled, the odds against the defenders remained very great.

'PLANE SHORTAGE

"Against the endless stream of German bombers," the correspondent continues, "the Red Air Force can oppose only a small number of modern fighting 'planes, of which there is now a definite shortage. The Russians have converted a number of former training 'planes into midget bombers, but this cannot compensate for the lack of heavy bombers and modern fighters. The air battle over Stalingrad is the struggle of a few brave pilots against fleets of the Luftwaffe's best machines. Only in artillery can the Red Army be said to have parity with the Germans. Artillery is in the forefront of the heavy battles now raging between the Don and the Volga north-west of Stalingrad, where Marshal Timoshenko, steadily making progress, has captured one important hill which served as a focal point of the German defences.

FIGHT FOR HEIGHT

"Most of the fighting is now concentrated around the range of hills north-west of the city, but it has again broken out in full force south of Stalingrad, where the Germans are attempting to encircle a Soviet force. Some time ago the Germans penetrated into the forests covering the Caucasus foothills and captured several important heights, from which they could observe and control the Russian forest communications. The Soviet Command has launched a determined attack in this sector, and fighting is going on for one mountain crowned by three peaks, which afford excellent possibilities for circular defence.

"South-east of Novorossisk the Rumanians, who suffered badly a few days ago, have now been reinforced by German troops, who have not been seen on this front for a long time. Despite these shock-troops, the enemy has not made any further progress towards the Black Sea coast. Cossacks and Black Sea Marines are holding firm everywhere.

STOCKHOLM REPORT

STOCKHOLM, Friday.—Marshal Timoshenko's relief offensive, which has been hammering at the German left flank for the last ten days, has, it is reported, at last obliged the Germans to draw off reserves from Stalingrad. If this report, reaching the Swedish Svenska Dagbladet, is confirmed, it shows that the Germans no longer have sufficient reserves to feed both the assault on the Workers' Settlement and the defences on the left flank. This would explain the sudden change of tactics announced by Berlin last night. All Swedish correspondents in Berlin report that German military circles have more or less clearly stated that the real storming of Stalingrad with infantry and pioneer troops has been cancelled.—(Reuter.)

SOVIET REPORT

Last night's Soviet communiqué from Moscow stated that Soviet troops repelled Axis attacks, and in the area of Stalingrad frustrated Axis attempts to break through to the Volga. The "N" unit, which had been surrounded for a few days, broke through the Axis ring and came out in the area of the Workers' Settlement. The Axis lost 300 killed. North-west of Stalingrad Soviet troops consolidated themselves in captured positions. The "N" unit, repelling an enemy attack, wiped out 120 Germans and destroyed one tank, five blockhouses and two dugouts.

In the Mozdok area a German attack was repelled. In one day Soviet troops accounted for 300 officers and men and destroyed ten lorries with ammunition.

On one sector on the Leningrad front Axis infantry, supported by tanks, launched an attack and captured two inhabited localities. In fierce fighting which followed Soviet troops counter-attacked and destroyed ten Axis tanks and inflicted heavy losses on man-power.

South of Voronezh a company of Hungarian infantry crossed the Don, but Soviet artillery and mortar-fire wiped out eighty of them and took ten prisoners.—(Reuter.)

DAYLIGHT RAID ON FRANCE

BIGGEST ON RECORD

ABOUT 600 fighter aircraft and the strongest force of bombers yet sent out on a daylight raid made a large sweep over Northern France yesterday, states the British Air Ministry News Service.

"At least five German fighters were destroyed by Fighter Command pilots. Four British bombers are missing, but the crew of one is safe. None of our fighters is missing.

"The main target for more than 100 United States Flying Fortresses and Liberators was the Fives-Lille Engineering Works, one of the most important in France, where steam and electric locomotives, bridge-building materials and other heavy engineering equipment are made. Factories which have a capacity of 100 to 150 main line type locomotives a year cover a large area on the east side of Lille. Near to the factories are a big railway repair depôt and goods terminus.

"The large battery of Fortresses and Liberators made the attacks with squadrons of fighters circling round in protection, while others sought enemy fighters.

"Meanwhile, on a front ranging from Dieppe to Dunkirk, with a 25 to 50-mile penetration inland, more fighters and more bombers were making diversionary sweeps.

Squadrons of fighters also swept the Dieppe - Neufchatel - Abbeville area. Further north, many fighter squadrons were circling the skies from Gravelines to Mardyck and Dunkirk, and inland, to Ypres and Dixmude. Still more swept up and down the coast from Dunkirk to the Dutch Islands.

"It was a United Nations operation; for squadrons with pilots from the Dominions and the Colonies, together with the United States of America Air Force took part. These, together with the many British squadrons, all worked under the direction of Fighter Command."

Single aircraft of the British Bomber Command, one of which is missing, yesterday morning bombed objectives in the Upper Rhineland.

GERMAN REPORT

The German High Command report of the attack stated:—"Taking advantage of heavy clouds, the British bombers, including several of the American type, penetrated to the coast. Anti-aircraft batteries and naval anti-aircraft guns immediately opened fire and drove the raiders from important war targets. German fighters went up and engaged the British fighters, which kept close to the bombers. Some of the sixteen brought down in bitter air battles were Flying Fortresses. The damage done by the bombs was small in comparison with the number of Allied 'planes employed. Most of the bombs dropped fell on inhabited houses in several localities. We deplore the deaths and injuries caused among the civilian populations of France and Belgium in the mass raid."—(Reuter.)

LAVAL'S "GRAVE TALKS"

LABOUR FOR GERMANY

VICHY, Friday.—M. Laval had grave talks with the German authorities in Paris on the provision of French labour for Germany, according to the communiqué published after to-day's French Cabinet meeting.

The head of the Government—M. Laval—the communiqué says, stressed the "importance and the gravity" of his talks with the occupying Power.

"The conversations dealt with the necessity of speeding up recruiting of labour for Germany, to which is linked the return of war prisoners." M. Laval emphasised "the urgent effort that must be made in the national interest to ensure the success of the operations now being carried out. This success can only be attained by the union of all Frenchmen round the Marshal and the Government."—(Reuter.)

An appeal to Frenchmen to support the Tricolour Legion—for service at home and abroad—was made to-night by Vichy radio's home service.

The commentator, Leon Bourdier, spoke of "Anglo-American designs on Dakar." "I prefer to sound the alarm too soon, rather than to have, in a fortnight's time, to deplore our dead soldiers and seamen, asphyxiated submarine crews, and airmen shot down," he said. "Beware, Frenchmen, the fate of the Empire is at stake."—(Reuter.)

MORE ENNIS CHARGES

REVENUE CLAIMS £30,000

At Ennis District Court yesterday there were twenty charges concerning the fraudulent evasion of Customs duties listed for hearing against Walter Chapman, of Bindon street, Ennis, director of L. Jordan, Ltd., proprietors of the Ennis Braid Mills. In these twenty charges the Revenue Commissioners elected to proceed for penalties amounting to close on £30,000.

Mr. M. J. Walshe, State Solicitor, applied for an adjournment of all the cases until Friday next, and said that he had informed Mr. E. Monahan, solicitor for the defence. Mr. Monahan said that he consented to the adjournment, which was granted.

ENNIS APPEAL ADJOURNED

Pending the decision of a case stated by District Justice Gleeson regarding Customs duties in which Messrs L. Jordon, Ltd., Ennis, and Mr. Chapman were involved, Judge T. O'Donnell, at Clare Circuit Court yesterday, adjourned the appeal of Walter Chapman against a fine of £5, with £7 10s. costs, imposed by District Justice Gleeson for refu-ing to produce copies of certain banking accounts of L. Jordan, Ltd., Leicester, to Mr. G. C. McElligott, inspector appointed by the Minister for Industry and Commerce, to investigate the affairs of L. Jordan, Ltd., Ennis.

REPATRIATED BRITONS

Eleven hundred repatriated Britons from Japan and China were landed at Liverpool, yesterday, from two ships that arrived from Lorenco Marques, in Portuguese East Africa, where the official exchange took place.

They included Sir Robert Craigie, ex-British Ambassador to Tokyo.

AGAR-AGAR: NEW INDUSTRY FROM SEAWEED

SPECIAL "IRISH TIMES" NEWS.

AGAR-AGAR has appeared on the industrial horizon as one of the economic hopes of the Gaeltacht districts. It is derived from a special kind of seaweed, which, in Japan, is specially cultivated, and is the basis of a big industry.

Agar-agar is a substance in which bacteria can be made to thrive, and, as such, is essential for the bacteriological research carried on in hospitals, universities and agricultural colleges. It is, moreover, a substance with gelatinising properties, and so has possibilities for use in jellies as a stiffener, as a thickener of soups, sauces and gravies; as a binding material for tinned cooked meats and fish, as a clarifying agent in beer, and for use in the making of size.

Most of the world's supply formerly came from Japan, with a little from the East Indies and California. Pre-war it was bought for about 15s. a pound, but now it costs 45s. a pound—when it can be obtained.

Ireland now makes its début in the agar-agar industry through the discovery on its west coast of a special seaweed—found in Galway Bay and other places—from which agar-agar can be made. Investigation has revealed the districts in which it can be obtained; quantities have been collected; and arrangements are being made for its manufacture. It is thought that the possibilities of the industry are quite good. Several laboratory workers in Dublin yesterday stated that they would be very glad to hear of a new source of supply.

FAMOUS DISH

The experiments in connection with its production have attracted the attention of scientists in other countries, and the research has been the subject of a special article in the Commercial Intelligence Journal of Canada, written by Mr. E. L. McColl, Canadian Government Trade Commissioner, who recently visited the South and West of Ireland. Agar-agar is only one of many edible seaweeds specially cultivated in Japan. Mr. K. Ichihashi, the Japanese Vice-Consul, told an Irish Times reporter. They are usually gathered in the winter-time, when they are tender, and one of them, called "Nori," eaten with boiled rice, is one of the most famous dishes in the Japanese cuisine. It is so highly esteemed that it is canned for export.

Other uses for agar-agar in Japan, where it is known as kanten, include the giving of a special shine to ladies' hair; for use in a special printing process used by Japanese newspapers when they are putting out quickly-printed extra editions; for giving a starched quality to cloth, and for use in the dyeing industry. It is very popular as a jelly and sweetmeat.

A Dublin scientist stated that agar-agar is the basis for many medicines. It has the advantage over gelatine that, while the latter melts at about blood-heat, agar-agar melts only at about boiling-point.

NEW JUDGE

MR. KEVIN HAUGH

The Irish Times understands that Mr. Justice Black will fill the vacancy in the Supreme Court caused by the death of Mr. Justice Meredith. It is understood also that the vacancy in the High Court which will be caused by Mr. Justice Black's promotion will be filled by Mr. Kevin Haugh, the Attorney-General.

Mr. Justice William Black is a native of Holywood, County Down, and was educated at the Methodist College, Belfast, and at Trinity College, Dublin. He was called to the Bar at the beginning of the century, and had an extensive practice in Dublin for many years. He took silk in 1935. He was former chairman of the Town Tenants' Occupation Tenancies Tribunal. Mr. Justice Black took part in the 1918 Sinn Fein election, and did important work in the reconstruction of Sinn Fein.

Mr. Kevin Haugh has been Attorney-General since 1940, and, at 40, he will be one of the youngest judges ever appointed to the High Court. He is a son of the late Professor John J. Haugh and is a graduate of the National University. He was called to the Irish Bar in 1925 and to the Inner Bar in 1939.

EIRE ASSETS IN COMMERCIAL BANKS

AN amendment to delete the sections in the Central Bank Bill requiring the commercial banks to hold larger proportions of Eire assets, and a suggestion that all appointments to the service of the bank should be made as a result of competitive examination, at which Irish should be a compulsory subject—these were features of a debate in the Senate yesterday, during which the Committee stage of the Central Bank Bill was passed.

Sir John Keane referred to the sections relating to commercial banks and Eire assets as "by far the most disturbing and disquieting sections in the whole bill," and claimed that they had not a sufficiently large proportion of Eire securities. He warned the Minister that, if this was not corrected in a certain time, a compulsory deposit would have to be made with the Central Bank, which might be reasonable, but which was not workable, and which could not be done within the whole banking system.

COULD NOT WORK

Banks, he said, could not of their own volition alter the external assets without the proposal coming from customers. The only effective way it could be done was by the importation of goods. In no case had the banks hesitated to finance the importation of capital goods if the security was satisfactory. These sections in the eyes of the banks held the whole bank up to ridicule because they could not work.

The Minister for Finance, Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly, would not agree that the importation of goods was the only means of implementing the sections. Banks, he said, could increase their internal loans. Action under the section would not be taken unless appropriate internal investments were available, and reasonable time would be allowed.

The amendment was withdrawn.

An amendment by Mr. Michael Hayes urging competitive examinations, with Irish a compulsory subject, for the appointment of candidates to the Central Bank, received support from virtually the entire House, including the Minister, but it was rejected because it might preclude the inclusion of older, experienced men, experts on banking, who might be unable to speak Irish. The Minister, however, promised Senator Hayes, when the amendment was withdrawn, that he himself would circulate an amendment. He assured him that he was not against the principle of competitive examinations or against the principle of promoting Irish everywhere, but pointed out that in this case it was hardly necessary, as there were so few appointments involved.

IRISH IN U.C.D.

When Mr. O'Kelly suggested that Senator Hayes might help to get the principle of competitive examinations with compulsory Irish adopted in appointments to the clerical and administrative staff of University College, Dublin, the Senator replied that he was merely a member of the staff, and had no responsibility, direct or indirect, for its government. U.C.D. had done a good deal more with regard to compulsory Irish than most critics thought.

The Senate adjourned until Wednesday next, when the report stage of the bill will be taken.

DUBLIN HAS TURF

Dublin's winter supply of turf now is assured, and the stocks accumulated in the city will, it is estimated, meet the requirements of the city on the present ration until the spring.

GESTURE TO CHINA

Britain, as a mark of friendship to China, has decided to offer her a draft Treaty ending British extra territorial rights and privileges in that county. Some of these rights have existed almost a hundred years, and it is believed Britain's action will be a great factor in promoting Chinese goodwill, particularly when normality can be resumed.

The decision, announced by the Government yesterday, marks an important step forward in China's development as a free and independent democracy. The United States Government has announced its intention to take similar action.—(Press Association.)

A NEW ANTI-T.B. WEAPON

(SPECIAL "IRISH TIMES" NEWS.)

THE possibilities of launching mass-radiography in Ireland by mass-radiographing the students of the Dublin Universities and medical colleges are being considered.

Approaches have been made to the authorities in the medical schools of Trinity College, University College and the College of Surgeons. Favourable replies have been received, but arrangements have not yet been made to start the work, as there is at the moment a shortage of the special apparatus used.

Mass-radiography is coming into public notice in many countries as an important weapon in the fight against tuberculosis. Dr. J. Duffy, Assistant Medical Officer of Health for Dublin, who is interested in the subject, told an Irish Times reporter that the idea underlying it was to detect tuberculosis in people before they felt the necessity of coming to a doctor. In very many cases when people did come to take medical advice it was too late for anything to be done.

Radiologists in two Dublin hospitals have fixed up cameras for this work. The apparatus for mass-radiography might be said, roughly, to bear the same relation to the regular apparatus as the miniature camera does to the studio camera. Suitable lenses, however, are very difficult to obtain. The size of film on which the radiograph is made is not more than about one square inch, though some authorities now consider that this is on the small side.

It is hoped that if the universities give a lead in having their students radiographed, then public bodies will fall into line, and give facilities for having this important survey done on a larger scale.

One of the biggest experiments in mass-radiography to be done in any country was done in the Australian Army. In 1940 100,000 Australian soldiers were radiographed at a cost of 10d. per head, including films, maintenance of apparatus, medical experts' salaries, clerical work and administrative staff. This low cost, however, was made possible only by the large numbers involved.

INSURANCE SCHEME EXPANSION

DECISION OF IRISH SHIPPING, LTD.

IT has been decided by Irish Shipping, Ltd., whose million-pounds-a-year war-risks insurance scheme was exclusively announced in the "Irish Times" this week, to expand the undertaking and include, in their cover, the strikes clause normally associated with this class of contract.

This will mean that war and strikes risks will be underwritten by the one set of underwriters and the marine risks with another.

Commenting last night on this development, a leading insurance broker said that it was unwise to separate the risks in the first instance, because, although they are separate risks and are capable of separate insurance, they commonly go together, and, by joining them, the strikes risks are included without even the nominal additional premium chargeable. There was nothing unusual, he added, in having war and strikes risks with one set of underwriters and marine risks with another.

STATE SECURITY

Dealing with the scheme generally, which he welcomed "as an insurance broker and an Irishman," he said that there were considerable misconceptions in the minds of many people as to what exactly was the scope, nature and object of the project. In the first place, a number of people were interested in the measure of security they would have if they effected insurance with this concern. The answer simply was that they had the whole security of the State behind their policy, as Irish Shipping, Ltd., was capitalised by the State, although operated as an independent company. At present it had a dozen ships, and, no doubt, it would add to the fleet as occasion offered. A question had been raised regarding the power of the company to underwrite marine or war risk insurance, but it hardly was likely that a concern of its importance would attempt to do something they were not empowered to do, and a glance at their memorandum and articles of association would have shown that they possessed such powers.

"In my opinion, it was a very wise move to adopt the well-known Institute War Risk Clauses, and now, presumably, the Institute Strikes Clauses, as it will give both brokers and assureds not only a continuity in the form of contract, but also a contract with which already they are familiar. It is, of course, to be assumed that the legal interpretation is to be taken as that of Irish law and Constitution where the clauses require such an interpretation."

IRISH AND U.K. RATES

In a criticism of the scheme which appeared in the Irish Times on Thursday reference was made to the "anomaly of a neutral contract containing the United Kingdom and Allies' clause." On this point he said that it was a separate and distinct clause, and would not appear in a contract underwritten by an Irish company, as the necessity for it did not arise. It was mandatory, of course, in all British clauses.

On the subject of rates he said that importers and other assureds had to pay heavy toll in war risks premiums since the war began, and, in spite of what one broker had said about the advisory schedules, it would be recalled that at one time the trans-Atlantic rate to Irish ports was 20 per cent., with the exception of the Port of Dublin, where 10 per cent. would be returned, but only if the vessel was in convoy, was not touching Atlantic islands, and was sailing viâ North Ireland Channel. From August, 1940, the rates quoted for Irish ports were separated from the U.K. rates, and were not brought into line again until March of this year. During that period, in practically every schedule, the rate was virtually double the U.K. rate, although there were various amendments, such as the application of the sailing warranties to all Irish ports. The point is that the Irish assured was entirely dependent for his war risks rating on a body on which his interests were not represented in any way, and which struck its rates on statistics which had nothing whatever to do with shipping into Ireland. Although at the present Irish Shipping, Ltd., is keeping in line with the general rate charged by Lloyd's underwriters, they have a free hand as circumstances dictate to fix their own rate.

CLAIMS

"Some people," he said, "seem to think there is something unique about the scheme, and, therefore, being in an experimental stage, undesirable to touch. This is not so. The Portuguese Government, for instance, have such a scheme in existence since the outbreak of war, and the Governments of most other neutral countries have similar schemes.

"Doubts have been expressed as to the difficulties which may be experienced where claims arise which cannot exactly be determined as war or marine. The English practice is for the marine underwriters to submit the case to a committee, which decides whether the loss is a marine loss or not, or, in indeterminate cases, what proportion is to be borne by the marine underwriters. It automatically follows that the war underwriters (if any) pay the balance. These payments, however, are only made by way of 'loan,' and the assured then subrogates all his right to underwriters. They, in turn, deposit their claim papers with the committee, and if, and when, any other determination is reached (such as that the loss was all war) an adjustment is made between underwriters themselves. I have made inquiries to ascertain if any similar arrangements would be made to establish agreement between Irish Shipping Ltd., as the war underwriters and British marine underwriters, and I am given to understand that steps have been taken to ensure such measure of agreement as may be necessary to secure that the assured will not be placed in any worse position in the event of a dispute as to the nature of a claim."

MARINE RATING

When asked about the suggestion that if an importer elected to place his war risks with Irish Shipping, Ltd., his marine rate, if the marine insurance were placed in the British market, would be adversely affected, and that the combined result would place such an importer in a less advantageous position than the importer who placed the combined risks in the British market, he replied:—"I can hardly conceive such an event happening. Marine rating for war-time purposes is governed by a surcharge which is fixed from time to time by the governing committee and the war risks rates have little or nothing to do with it. As I have already mentioned, the underwriters for marine and war risks may be quite distinct and separate. In any case, I feel sure that such an eventuality has already been considered by Irish Shipping, Ltd., and that they would have plans for meeting such an eventuality. They may even have in mind to underwrite, at some future date, marine risks as well, but, in any event, they are always free to vary their rates or war risks having regard to the situation as a whole. The scheme appears to be optional for the assured, but I have no doubt that Irish importers and merchants will welcome a national underwriting concern which has the security of the State behind it."

CURFEW FOLLOWS BELFAST OUTRAGES

Because of the repeated attacks on police in Belfast, a curfew from 8.30 p.m. until 6 a.m. has been imposed on that part of the city in which this week's outrages have occurred.

The part of the city affected is bounded by Grosvenor road, Falls road, Divis street and Durham street.

Only those with official permits will be allowed in the area during curfew.

Four bombing attacks on police stations and patrols, as well as shootings, in which police and civilians have been injured, have occurred in the district.

Nine persons have been detained by police searching houses in the area in which Thursday night's bomb outrage occurred. Constable Wilson, who was wounded at Cullingtree Road Police Barracks, was stated to be fairly comfortable last night.

ANOTHER BOMB

Another bomb was thrown in Belfast last night, making the fourth successive bombing this week. It exploded outside the Shankill road police barrack without injuring anybody.

The Shankill road barrack is some distance outside the new curfew area. The curfew area was quiet last night.

SHOOTING OF DETECTIVE

ARREST IN BELFAST

A man, believed to be Hugh McAteer, a native of Derry, who is wanted by the Dublin police for questioning in connection with the shooting of Detective Sergeant O'Brien, was arrested by detectives last night in Belfast, where he is said to be the Chief of Staff of an illegal organisation.

He was walking along a street in the city with a companion when he was placed under arrest.

Michael Quille, Listowel, Kerry, one of the eight men who, according to police posters, are being sought by the authorities for questioning following the shooting of Detective Sergeant O'Brien at Ballyboden on September 9th, presented himself at the Bridewell, Dublin, for an interview yesterday.

ANTRIM MAN'S DEATH

TEN YEARS FOR SOLDIERS

Two soldiers, Corporal Herbert G. Jacobs (20) and Private E. Embra Farley (24) were at a court in Northern Ireland yesterday charged with the murder of Edward Clenaghan, son of a publican in County Antrim. They were found guilty of voluntary manslaughter, sentenced to be dishonourably discharged, and to ten years' hard labour.

Clenaghan was found at the roadside shortly before midnight on September 21st, and the allegation was that he had been struck on the head with a steel helmet.

REVIEW OF WAGES

Of 123 applications relating to wage increases received by the Ministry of Industry and Commerce—92 for standard rates of wages orders and 31 for bonus orders—66 have been referred by the Minister to the Tribunals set up under the Emergency Powers Order dealing with wages control. The other applications were received within the last few days.

Of the 66 being dealt with by the Tribunals, reports have been submitted in 35 cases, and the remainder will be disposed of at an early date. No application has been rejected, and in three cases where employers declined to join in applications for bonus orders the Minister is considering whether the refusal was unreasonable.

BRITISH CRUISER LOST

The British Board of Admiralty states that H.M.S. Coventry (Captain R. J. R. Dendy, R.N.) has been sunk. The next-of-kin of casualties have been informed.

The Press Association adds:—H.M.S. Coventry, an anti-aircraft cruiser, had a displacement of 4,290 tons and was completed in February, 1918. Her complement was 400.

KILLED BY 'BUS

Peggy Finnerty (5), of Lower Clanbrassil street, Dublin, was killed at New street, Dublin, yesterday, when she was run over by a 'bus.

GERMANY TO CHAIN THREE FOR ONE

ITALY ALSO THREATENS TO RETALIATE

FOR every German prisoner manacled by the British authorities at noon to-day Berlin yesterday announced that three Dieppe prisoners will be placed in fetters.

The threat was contained in the German communiqué, which stated that 107 British officers and 1,269 non-commissioned officers and men had been fettered on Thursday.

Rome now announces that "legitimate reprisals" are inevitable following upon the "discovery at Tobruk of a document ordering that all Italians in a certain sector were to be killed."

GERMAN COMMUNIQUE

"Since the announcement by the German High Command of October 7, in which reprisal measures against the fettering of German prisoners at Dieppe, and on the Island of Sark, were made known, the British Government have only made excuses, referred to statements of German war prisoners who were not manacled, and declared that they do not, and will not, countenance the binding of war prisoners in the field," said yesterday's German communiqué.

"Since the British Government has not referred to the fact that, notwithstanding the former and the present hypocritical statements of the British War Office, German prisoners were fettered in a crude way on October 8, at noon. 107 British officers and 1,269 non-commissioned officers and men who were taken prisoner at Dieppe were put in fetters after they had been informed on the reasons.

"Chaplains, medical personnel, wounded and sick were not manacled.

"In the evening of October 8 the British War Office announced that an equal number of German prisoners will be manacled and put in irons from October 10 onwards.

"If this should be done, the German High Command will put into fetters three times the number of British prisoners of war from noon on October 10, onwards."—(Reuter.)

BRITISH INQUIRY

The Press Association Diplomatic Correspondent states that the British authorities have taken steps to obtain from the Protecting Power details of the conditions and circumstances in which the British prisoners captured at Dieppe are now being held. According to one report in London yesterday the International Red Cross Society had also been asked to make investigations.

Whether the representatives of the Protecting Power have yet seen the German prisoners taken by the British at Dieppe, and now interned in Britain, is not clear.

It is the intention of the British Government to regard all the Axis prisoners in their hands as on the same footing, and to make no differentiation as between German and Italians. Britain holds 285,000 Axis prisoners (23,000 German and 262,000 Italian). The total number of British prisoners in Axis hands is 115,000 (90,000 in German hands and 25,000 in Italian hands).

ITALY'S CASE

ALLEGED ATROCITIES

Rome radio yesterday gave details of alleged British atrocities, for which they are taking reprisals:—

"Four British fighters machine-gunned with explosive ammunition first-aid units of the Folgare division on October 7, at 1.45 p.m. These airmen operated at less than 20 metres altitude, and without any risk, since the first-aid units were not protected by anti-aircraft fire. These units displayed a number of identity marks. On elevated ground and in broad daylight they could not escape this criminal act, which caused three deaths and a dozen wounded among the hospital cases. Henceforth it will not longer be possible to believe in involuntary errors when this tragic episode is linked with others, which were verified on the occasion of the recent British action at Tobruk.

"A document which fell into our hands, issued on the occasion of the attack on Tobruk, said that the 10th Platoon would detach a section to attack dug-out No. 1082, and that those who were found there should be completely liquidated without discrimination.

"This behaviour, with which one must link previous attacks on hospital ships and ambulance seaplanes, contrasts sharply with the action of Italians when they learn of the presence of an ambulance column in the desert engaged in picking up enemy wounded abandoned by their own detachments or when they order their troops to save numerous enemy crews—as has happened in the Bay of Tobruk. Our more than justified reprisals will thus be rendered inevitable."—(Reuter.)

PHŒNIX PARK DEER

QUESTIONS FOR DAIL

The question of the shooting of the Phœnix Park deer will be raised in the Dail next week. Dr. J. Hannigan will ask for the name of the actual contractor. It will be suggested that certain people interested in the killing of the deer are not prepared to disclose their names.

Information also will be sought as to whether the surplus deer were advertised for sale or whether tenders were invited for their purchase; what are the terms of the contract, and whether the contract involved an obligation on the Government to assist in the round-up and killing of the deer.

The Minister also will be asked about the price realised for the deer, the destination of the venison and the price at which it is sold. It will be suggested that the venison should be kept in Ireland and served to the poor of Dublin.

Information also will be sought as to the number of deer it is proposed to retain for the purpose of restocking after the emergency.

MEN HAD NO PERMITS

Patrick Codd, of Barrack street, Tullow, and Joseph Martin, of O'Malley street, Tullamore, were sentenced, in Belfast, to a month's imprisonment for entering Northern Ireland without a document of identity. They were stated to have obtained work as van-drivers, and to have said that they got a lift part of the way to Northern Ireland.

THE KEY TO Romance

To the girl with a flawless complexion—a satin-smooth, clear skin—lively, vivid, smiling lips—romance seems to come easily. Glamorous loveliness needn't be—in fact, isn't—expensive. OUTDOOR GIRL beauty aids are priced very reasonably. But others costing perhaps ten times as much are no better—only the packing is more costly. And the special Olive Oil base in all OUTDOOR GIRL Preparations is wonderfully good for your skin.

Crawford moves from out half to take Robertson's place in the centre, and R. Lilburn and R. Matyer will play at half-back. M. Solomons comes on for T. R. Horan in the pack.

INGLE GAINS EASY VICTORY

Jimmy Ingle received an ovation from a packed "house" in the Round Room of the Rotunda last night, when he made his debut as a professional boxer. His opponent was J. Flanagan, of Belfast, who was attempting to concede the amateur champion 5lb. over ten two-minute rounds. From the outset Ingle had the full measure of his much older rival, and using right and left with deadly effect, it became a question of how long the Northerner could stand up to it. It was all Ingle in the first round. In the second Flanagan took very heavy punishment, and half-way through it Ingle finished it with two smashing punches to the body.

It took Pat Mulcahy the greater part of the first three rounds of his bout with Pat Flynn (Belfast) to settle down, but from the fourth round he was on top. With straight lefts and right hooks he piled on the points, and in the eighth round, after going to the boards from a right to the chin and immediately after taking a count of seven, Flynn gave up, being then practically out on his legs.

Light-weight—Siki O'Neill (Dublin) and J. Nugent (Belfast) drew.

Welter-weight—Jimmy Ingle (Dublin) beat J. Flanagan (Belfast), who retired in the second round.

HARD FIGHT FOR LENIHAN

G. Morahan came very near to being the first man to beat W. Lenihan, but a magnificent recovery by the former bantam-weight champion earned him a narrow verdict. Lenihan had not fought for almost a year prior to last night's tournament at the Stadium, but in the early stages he showed little sign of the lay-off. However, when well on top he ran into a right cross of Morahan's just before the end of the second round, and was down for a count of eight when the bell went. He was sorely worried in the third round, but defended skilfully, and won the fourth in his old style. Strong as ever, Morahan came back to take the fifth, but Lenihan put in a glorious finish and had his opponent almost out. It was a superb exhibition by both, and puts Morahan right in the top class.

After a season's absence from the ring, J. McGauran came back last night to put up a splendid show against the formidable T. Christy, who only won by staging a remarkable recovery in the last round. Up to that point of a grand scrap McGauran had a useful lead.

Bantam-weight—W. Lenihan (Arbour Hill) beat G. Morahan (North City) on points; T. Christy (Arbour Hill) beat J. McGauran (St. Vincent's) on points.

Feather-weight—P. Byrne (Scots) beat R. Coughlan (Arbour Hill) on points; Pte. W. Gifford (Army and North City) beat A. Delahunt (Arbour Hill) on points.

Light-weight—Pte. S. Yeates (Army and Arbour Hill) beat J. Nulty (Avona) on points.

Welter-weight—T. Foran (St. Andrew's) beat Cpl. V. Black (Baldonnel) on points.

Middle-weight—Cpl. M. Coffey (Army and Arbour Hill) beat G. Dwyer (St. Andrew's) on points.

TO ANY YOUNG IRISHMAN

who is still hesitating to assist in the defence of the country.

YOU know that a big parade took place in Dublin last Sunday week, in which many Units of the Army and of the Emergency Services showed the high pitch of perfection which had been reached after months of training.

Now the majority of those who took part were civilians like YOURSELF not so long ago, but they heard the call and are now showing what each of them can do and are willing to do for their country in this time of stress.

YOU know that recruits are urgently required for all branches of the Forces, and that because you have not yet come forward to fill it. What is keeping YOU back? Want of opportunity can hardly be the reason. Every parish has a section of one of the Voluntary Emergency Services for the man who has only his spare time in which to help.

If YOU are free there is plenty of room

IN THE ARMY

Skilled tradesmen are required in the Army Corps of Engineers, and Motor Drivers and Motor Mechanics are wanted for all Corps and Services.

As it may be difficult owing to restricted travel facilities to get to the Recruiting Office at the nearest Military Barracks or Camp, the Mobile Recruiting Station will visit your locality as shown hereunder, and you can enlist there and then and be carried to the Recruit Training Depot.

The Recruiting Officer on the 'Bus will give you all particulars as to conditions of service in the Army, including the new increased rates of pay. Your clothing, quarters and medical attention are all given free, and so is your food, which is good, plentiful, and well cooked, too. And in case you have made up your mind to join, don't forget to bring your Ration Book with you.

War in the Air

Victory Through Air Power. By Major Alexander Seversky. London: Hutchinson. 9/6 net.

THE controversy about the relative merits of air and naval power is nearly as old as the R.A.F., but it is only in the last three years that the protagonists have had much beyond theory to work upon. Now, with the Bismarck, the Prince of Wales and the Repulse at the bottom of the sea, the terrific importance of air power is being realised, even in maritime circles.

Major Seversky, however, is something more than an up-to-date intruder in this controversy. His conception of air power's possibilities is as sweeping as anything yet put on paper. He sees the certainty of victory only in the destruction of the enemy's means of producing military supplies; and that destruction now is possible only by bombing from the air. While not suggesting that the Navy and Army have insignificant roles to play, he points out that an offensive in which air strategy plays the biggest part calls for planning by air strategists, and a unified command, so that all arms may co-operate in a properly planned fighting scheme.

"Ballygullion"

It has just been announced that Lynn Doyle's famous book of short stories, "Ballygullion," is being reprinted in the Penguin series. This is a signal honour for one of the most industrious and modest of contemporary Irish writers; for inclusion in the Penguin series puts the hall-mark of excellence on a writer's work. It is thirty-five years since "Ballygullion" was written, and thirty-four since it appeared in book form for the first time. To have stood the test of such a period of time is a tribute to a book that never has lost its popularity, and is likely now, when it becomes accessible to a wider public, to become more popular than ever it was.

Lynn Doyle has written many books since "Ballygullion"; but he never has surpassed the brightness and racy flavour of that admirable piece of work. Possibly, his "Ulster Childhood" is a more finished production from the purely literary point of view; but "Ballygullion" is one of the outstanding works of its kind, and if he never had written another line, Lynn Doyle would have been assured by it of a high place among Irish men of letters.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK

Two Poems by Ethna MacCarthy

REQUIEM.

"REST," to me the wise ones croon, but rest like shadow needs an ardent noon and in disuse its pallid embers fall, as papery scabious wilts in senile warmth beneath September's purpling wall.
Give back the rebel summer days with their short deep repose.
Oh! stay the chill chrysanthemum, and give me back the flagrant rose.
Turn fast the sanded hoop of hours or let my rest be buried under flowers.

HARLEQUIN.

MY love is of the moon
pale sequin and velvet cratered depths, pure light and softest shaggy dark.
Like her he seeks the sun for warmth to ramble the livid streets from dusk and barter his tranquillity for tears, and never knows how good he is or tired, but fights the sordid strident day till like a child he rests a little in my arms.
And then the fearful maturation of the light lifts at his languid head. And so he goes, to skim the scattered sequins from the pools.

Bombs in Belfast

Every patriotic Irishman will be shocked at the news that a "curfew" has been imposed in certain parts of Belfast, just as he will have been shocked during the last week or so at the deplorable increase in bomb outrages in the Northern capital. The history of Ireland is full of examples of the malignant working of the vicious circle. Political outrage leads to official repression, which in turn leads to political outrage; and so the dreadful business goes on, levying a dire toll of Irish lives, and widening the already formidable gap that has been created between Irishmen of differing political beliefs. The existing situation in the six counties is particularly unfortunate. Northern Ireland officially is at war, whereas Eire is neutral. In these circumstances, the Northern Government hardly can be blamed if it takes drastic measures in order to preserve the public peace within the area under its control, and, above all, if it does everything in its power to suppress acts of physical violence against servants of the State. In recent weeks there has been a marked revival of armed attacks on the police in Northern Ireland. Particularly in the city of Belfast, bombs have been exploded outside police stations, and it has become evident that numbers of well-armed men, who are ill-disposed to the State, are at large. Last night it was announced that a strict "curfew" would be enforced inside a certain area of West Belfast, comprising roughly the Nationalist quarter. This area is bounded by Grosvenor road, the Falls road, Divis street and Durham street, and is about one square mile in extent. From last night onwards nobody in this district will be allowed to be abroad between the hours of 8.30 p.m. and 6 a.m. The Government has taken advantage of its powers under the Civil Authorities (Special Powers) Act, and, of course, it is quite within its rights. Public order must be maintained. On the other hand, one cannot but deplore the situation that has led up to this drastic decision. At a time when all Irishmen of goodwill are striving to undo the evils of partition, and to create a better atmosphere between North and South, it is most unfortunate that the conditions which existed twenty years ago should be re-established in the North. Some evil genius seems to dog the footsteps of the Irish people. Unhappily, there can be no doubt that the gulf fixed between the two parts of Ireland has been broadened since the outbreak of the present war, and that all hope of eventual unity between South and North has been—to say the least of it—deferred. Those misguided young men who believe that they are serving the cause of a united Ireland by throwing bombs at policemen in Belfast are guilty of a crime against our common country. They are playing into the hands of those who are determined at all costs to perpetuate the partition of this little island; and the mere fact that visitors from the South now must obtain a special permit if they wish to stay for more than six weeks in the Northern area ought to be sufficient proof of the damage that has been done of late to the cause which every decent Irish citizen ought to have at heart.

Lean Years

"Austerity" is the word of the moment in Great Britain, and, for a dozen reasons, it is likely to become the word of the moment after next in this country of ours. Ireland is rich in many commodities of which Great Britain is short; Britain, on the other hand, has a sufficiency of goods which are lamentably far from plentiful on this side of the Channel. Nevertheless, to quote the technical phrase, both countries—in this respect probably resembling all other countries, belligerent and neutral, on the face of the globe—have declined from their pre-war standard of living. Everybody has been compelled to abandon something or other that gave him pleasure a few years ago. He may have exchanged his private car for an omnibus, or a bicycle, or a walk; perhaps, he is compelled to rise from bed an hour earlier in the morning to avail himself of the gas; he eats a possibly more wholesome, but certainly less palatable, loaf of bread; and he finds himself, with the approach of winter, considerably colder than he was of yore. Are these sacrifices merely temporary? At the risk that we may be charged by Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly with undue pessimism, we decline to think so. We believe that the effects of the current war will be felt, both by belligerent and by neutral nations, for many a long year after the conclusion of peace; indeed, we question if any child who is born to-day will enjoy more than a fraction of the amenities which were known to people during the twenty years between the two great wars of this century. No war in history has involved so large a portion of the world; none certainly has required so colossal an expenditure of energy, so great a wastage of human effort. An entirely new "design for living" may be evolved; but, according to any system hitherto operated, it appears certain that many generations of mankind must pay the price which has been exacted by this generation. In a sentence, it will be a poor world after the war—a world which will have been stripped of what once were regarded as luxuries, a world which will have been reduced to what, only a few years earlier, would have been condemned as frugality. In that decline of the standard of living the neutral nation will suffer equally with the belligerent.

The statesmen of this country of ours can take credit from the fact that, from the earliest moment of the war, they adopted a gloomy view. They are open to criticism because they failed to act upon their views; but, at least, they were not conspicuously deceitful. We may expect that they will take what—without cynicism—they must regard as an equally depressing view of the conditions after the war. This Ireland of ours will be a poor country. She may have heaps of money laid up in the form of credit, but who can say what good that credit will be to her? Her rich will be less rich; her poor, as we fear—despite all the promises of all the politicians—will be poorer, although the disparity between the two may have been, to some extent, redressed. Every indication is that the aftermath of the war will be more severe than the war itself. Is any attempt being made to face those circumstances? Is any thought being taken for the years following the conclusion of peace—years that will be almost infinitely more confused than the period after the last World War? There are those who reply that Providence looks over this nation, and will preserve it. That is all very well, but Providence demands a certain amount of help from the people whom it proposes to benefit; and it is upon the exertions of the people of Ireland to-day that the security, and the prosperity, of the people of Ireland to-morrow will depend. Certain things are obvious. Hydro-electric power must be developed, in order that there may be less dependence upon coal. More grain must be grown. There must be a deeper inquiry into the possibility of creating industries which will be independent of imported materials—not of industries which seem to be self-supporting, but, in fact, rely for their existence upon goods from abroad. This nation is fortunate inasmuch as it is able to feed itself, and to fuel itself—or ought to be able to do so. Nevertheless, it has lost the art, and must recover it. The really far-seeing Government will cease to worry itself about the "national outlook," and will consider rather the efficiency of the nation of two centuries ago—the self-contained nation. It will encourage the spirit of hard work and self-supporting enterprise which must animate every Irish citizen if he is to endure the lean years.
